(Bloomberg) -- Jeff Feig, who co-managed Fortress Investment Group LLC's macro hedge fund since joining a year ago, is leaving as the fund's losses deepen, Reuters reported.
The fund, which Feig ran with Fortress principal Mike Novogratz, lost 7.1 percent this year through May, according to a regulatory filing. That follows a 1.6 percent decline in 2014.
Gordon Runte, a spokesman for New York-based Fortress, and Feig didn't immediately return messages seeking comment.
Fortress hired Feig last year from Citigroup Inc., where he was global head of foreign exchange.
